

made your observations. Now at this point, Elbery is already outside. What next happens?

A. I told the girl's girlfriend that she should take her to one of the hospitals and get it checked, and then I told her that it was not a bad cut and if she just kept the towel depressed against her face, she should be fine, but that she should get it looked at.

I walked the girl and her girlfriend out to the sidewalk where their car was, and they got in the car and they left, I assumed it was for a hospital or something like that.

Q. When you went out to do that, walk the two girls outside, did you make any observations about where Mr. Elbery was or where Mr. Thomas King was or anyone else?

A. I know that --I don't know how many hundred feet it was down the road, in front of an auto parts store or something like that, I know that Mike was on the ground with three or four people, there was a couple of people sitting on him, with one of them holding him down and one or two other people standing around him.

Q. Okay. So there were a few people
